Investment Philosophy

Decades of experience inform JAG's conservative approach to managing your fixed income investments. We believe a well-managed bond portfolio delivers stability and predictability while offering an attractive yield and minimizing interest rate risk. Consequently, our Enhanced Core Fixed Income strategy targets short- to intermediate-duration securities and utilizes laddered maturities to mitigate yield-curve and reinvestment risk. We believe the judicious assumption of credit risk is necessary to produce meaningful, long-term alpha. Accordingly, our team of analysts employs a research-driven, bottom-up process for idea generation and security selection leading to a consistent overweight in corporate credit. We believe our straightforward approach to portfolio construction, coupled with our differentiated, security-specific positioning, enhances our strategy's potential for dependable and competitive total return without using leverage or esoteric and complicated derivatives. In most capital market environments, the Enhanced Core Fixed Income strategy will exhibit low to moderate annualized turnover.

Investment Process

JAG's Enhanced Core Fixed Income Strategy invests in coupon paying, US dollar denominated securities with a final maturity of 15 years or less. Issuers involved in the production of offensive weaponry, tobacco, and distilled spirits are prohibited. Foreign sovereign debt instruments, distressed or defaulted issues, and structured products are excluded from consideration.

Our research team continuously conducts value-centric screening to identify attractive candidates for purchase within the universe of investable securities. Candidates are subjected to rigorous fundamental analysis which incorporates a comprehensive review of credit quality, financial statements, SEC filings, debt and liquidity statistics and trends, and issue specific covenants and structure. Quantitative metrics, comprising relative and absolute historical performance, relative value versus peers, market-depth and liquidity, and various risk and valuation measurements are considered. Corporate communications, including earnings calls, company presentations, press releases, and investor newsletters, are reviewed alongside third-party and sell-side research to provide context to and inform our internal observations. Subject to client specific instructions and restrictions, this process results in a focused but diversified portfolio of 40 to 50 individual, security-specific holdings.

Despite the buy-and-hold bias intrinsic to our philosophy, JAG is not averse to selling a given security when conditions warrant. We believe that disciplined and on-going review is integral to the portfolio management process. Therefore, when our management team determines that a strategy holding no longer offers adequate compensation for the risk being assumed we exit the position and replace it from our list of qualified candidates.

Our approach to fixed income investing is analogous to a winning baseball team in that both find success hitting singles and doubles and neither strikes-out by swinging for the fences.
